The University of Nebraska, College of Architecture is seeking a candidate to fill a full time, nine-month, tenure track assistant professor in the Interior Design Program effective fall 2016. The Interior Design program in the College of Architecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is dynamic, interactive and continually evolving. Both the College and the Interior Design program pursues an innovative curriculum that aims to simultaneously develop disciplinary knowledge, establish scholarship, as well as integrate skills and core topics essential for the professional practice of interior design. The Interior Design Program supports a fully accredited undergraduate program, as well as a blended-learning graduate program that serves as a benchmark for the academic community and the profession.

The faculty seeks highly motivated candidates, versed in the discipline of Interior Design and desire to be part of a collaborative team dedicated to the advancement of an emerging interdisciplinary college within a land-grant institution. Excellence in design and a passion for teaching is our highest priority. As part of this vision we are seeking an exceptional designer who is committed to teaching excellence and is able to spearhead teaching design studios across the curriculum. In addition, the candidate will be expected to contribute to core curriculum courses, as well as develop seminar courses in his or her research area. Expertise in human/environmental behavior, service learning and engagement, interdisciplinary instruction and learning, or the practice of evidence base design is desired.

The Program is situated within the College of Architecture along with the programs of Community and Regional Planning, Architecture, and Landscape Architecture. Collectively the College faculty forms a collaborative teaching and research environment that values cross-program and interdisciplinary initiatives. The active learning environment in the program is centered around studio-based learning and provides students with an extraordinary education in the design of the built environment.
